DEAR GUARDSMEN: We sincerely hope that Delaware's Adj Gen Joseph J Scannell (among others) notices this little blurb. For if he does, he'll be abused of any notion that we circular-filed a good suggestion he advanced last Dec. He wrote then: "For a number of years I have enjoyed the series of back covers of the 'Guardian,' depicting stirring moments in the history of the National Guard. We would like to have a set of these prints suitable for framing." He went on to comment about the "barren and forbidding" aspect of many armories, and that attractive reproductions of our "house ads" posted therein "would provide a training aid to help in preserving Guard traditions."

Right then we started looking into it. Didn't know how much it would cost, or what the demand might be. But we began figuring what kind of "treatment" we could give these ads to make them suitable for framing, and how we'd package them, and so on. We had facts and ideas pretty well pulled-together. About that time, certain difficulties arose at Pentagon-Congressional level which kept things in an uproar for a couple of months. It was "first things, first," and all else was pushed aside.

Now that things have simmered-down, we've finished the "staff study" of the poster idea. We could offer reprints of 20 different back covers, on good paper with "white space" to set off the art work, at about $2 per set of 20.

Before we enter a print order, however, we need some clue as to possible demand. We'd appreciate hearing from AGs, organization and unit commanders, and individuals, who would be interested in ordering sets; tell us how many.
THE STAFF

OUR COVER: Alluding to the sweeping changes combat units will undergo when they reorganize under the "Pentomic" structure in our Atomic Age Army, our cover symbolizes Part II, "The Pentomic Infantry Division," presented in this issue. Commanders might well preserve the articles for troop training.
