

Now flying, the ELECTRA is available for "off-the-shelf" procurement by the military services.

introducing the new

ELECTRA PROP-JET TRAINER

America's first commercial prop-jet transport, the all-new Lockheed Electra, is now in production for leading world airlines.

Lockheed surveys of USAF training requirements formed the basis for Lockheed designs proposed for 2 trainer versions of the Electra. The advanced Electra navigator trainer and the electronic countermeasures trainer are both ideal for these highly specialized missions. Each combines new concepts of individualized student instruction, safety, performance flexibility and operational economy never before achieved in one airplane for Air Force training programs.

DEAR GUARDSMEN: John Bibb's got that worried look again.

John (he's our Office Manager) says he's wondering how in the world he can ever hope to catch up to all of the subscribers who seem to be constantly on the move. The address change notices—and the returns for "Moved—Left No Address"—are coming in at the rate of about 1,300 a month. His racks of address stencils can't be complete for even a second with the constant flow of stencils being "pulled," recut, reinked, and replaced.

The worst of it is that there are, at any given moment, hundreds of good subscribers to whom we just can't get a magazine—and piles of unread magazines that cost good dough to print, good dough for the outgoing postage, and a nickel each for return postage from their fruitless journey over maybe thousands of miles. They've come back because the subscriber moved without telling us where to, or didn't tell us until after his magazine already had been mailed.

We run a Change of Address coupon in 'most every issue. Wish you'd use it as soon as you move. If you live in a postal-zoned city, it would help, too, if you'd include the zone number in your address. THE STAFF

OUR COVER: If ever there was a unique and little-understood type of military organization, it's the Aircraft Control & Warning unit. It doesn't produce a bang, a roar, or a rumble. Its people, by and large, spend most of their duty time indoors, looking at radar scopes, fiddling with electronic stuff. Most conspicuous of their "weapons system" is a futuristic-looking tower and antenna, like that on our cover (courtesy, Utah AFNG), shooting out invisible impulses to be bounced back onto a luminous scope if they hit anything. But there are moments of drama and achievement for these ground-bound Air Guardsmen; for more about it, see, in this issue: "A C W."
