Hawker 800XP has new Garrett 731-5BR engines.

Which translates to more of everything. More speed, faster climb, higher payloads with shorter take-off field length. And the most range of any competitor in its class—2,513 nautical miles. The new Hawker 800XP features other dramatic improvements as well. New engine controls, an upgraded environmental control system, and improved braking.

By now you've probably figured out that the "XP" stands for Extended Performance. Something we think you'll wholeheartedly agree with. For more information, call 1-800-866-1000.

Where the Grass Roots Come Together24

The National Guard Association has been a successful presence for the National Guard on Capitol Hill for more than a Century. There are a variety of reasons for the Association's many successes, but one of the most important is the grass roots support from across the country that the Association can call on when necessary. National Guard members are critical to the work that the Association does and the results of their grass roots efforts can be seen in Washington every day.

The Chief Shares His Thoughts 30

The Chief of the National Guard Bureau, LTG Edward D. Baca, gives the men and women of the Army and Air National Guard his thoughts about what the future may hold. General Baca discusses the changing nature of the Guard's missions and force structure as the world shifts from the industrial age to the information age. The general also shares his thoughts on the importance of technology and readiness as the National Guard prepares itself for the 21st Century.

<http://www.ngaus.org> 66

As National Guard members adapt themselves to the technology of the 21st century, their Association is moving along right beside them. Recently, in an effort to strengthen its links to its membership and interested parties throughout the world, the Association instituted a home page on the world-wide web. Now, at a moments notice, you can get the latest news from Washington and the world about what is going on with the National Guard. Today's minutemen can now reach their Association at a moments notice.
