Features

18 Buckeye Breakthrough

In Nicaragua, politics can be just as stormy as the weather. But despite the historical differences between the Central American nation and its U.S. neighbors, National Guard efforts are under way to repair damages — both from Hurricane Mitch and decades of political turmoil.

24 Quiet Comes to Kosovo

With the bombing campaign now over, Air Guard fighters and refuelers are coming home. Peacekeeping forces have replaced them, but is there any room in all this for the Army Guard? Maybe not.

27 Fire Down Below

A new fire season is blazing in full glory down south. In Florida, the Guard once again got the call to help out. But these fires aren't what you'd expect. They burn underground.

30 'Proffitt-able' Return

Last month we took World War II veteran Carl Proffitt with us to France to commemorate the D-Day invasion. He was welcomed as a hero by France and greeted like an old friend by strangers. From stone to steeple, he remembered the way it was.

34 The Fate of Our Fighters

Within days of deploying to Kosovo, Air Guard A-10 fighters were lighting up Serb tanks. Meanwhile, their cousins, the F-15s and F-16s, sat at home on Air Guard bases across the United States. Why? Because they aren't equipped to fight today's battles.
