

Bradley A3 training— a leap ahead ...

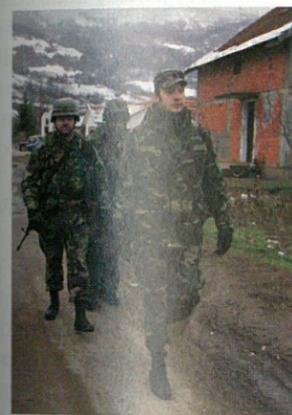

Good training is key to soldier performance. But there are never enough ranges, labs, or time to train, until now. The Bradley A3 with embedded "Virtual Range" provides realistic training simulations for the individual or crew. The Army's first integrated platform design revolutionizes training and improves performance. Now you and your Bradley team can realize your full potential with a self-contained, fully interactive, digital simulator — whether you're in the motor pool or deployed in the field.

Key to Army 2010 and beyond, the Bradley A3 incorporates advanced digitized systems with software and electronics for enhanced lethality and situational awareness.

18 Unknown Paradigm

The military is likely to get a lot of attention the next four years. As promised, President Bush has put the military in the spotlight, providing many days of headlines. But the news hasn't been everything supporters hoped for, especially when it comes to funding.

25 Diving into the Caucus

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., has taken over as co-chairman of the Senate National Guard Caucus. He will serve with his Republican counterpart, Sen. Christopher "Kit" Bond of Missouri to head the 75-member group that champions Guard issues in the Senate. He spoke with NATIONAL GUARD magazine about his vision for the caucus.

36 Legislative Priorities

Each year, the NGAUS sends to Congress a list of the National Guard's legislative priorities. The fiscal year 2002 list covers the Army and Air National Guard requirements for the upcoming budget.

64 State and Congressional Guide

NATIONAL GUARD magazine's annual reference features information on each state's Guard organizations and congressional delegation.

96 Bosnia Beat

For the first time, National Guard troops are doing the "grunt" work in Bosnia. About 350 members combined of North Carolina's 30th Infantry Brigade and Oklahoma's 45th Infantry Brigade help patrol the country side, often stopping to talk to people—Muslim, Serb and Croat—to monitor compliance with the 1995 Dayton Peace Accord.
