

modities he has at once helped to discharge his obligation to the advertiser and at the same time enable the publisher to continue the presentation of those things in which the reader is interested.

During the past four years, the advertising pages of THE NATIONAL GUARD MAGAZINE have been constantly growing in scope and effectiveness until these pages have now become a distinct help and of very great educational value to every reader. There is no more important department of the periodical than its advertising pages. Let us urge you first to read them and next to patronize the advertisers represented therein who by reason of their interest make it possible for the National Guard of the country to have a periodical of such wide influence and power for the betterment of our conditions as is THE NATIONAL GUARD MAGAZINE. It is a pleasure, therefore, for us to commend to you the advertisers listed below.
