AS WE SEE IT

KNOWLEDGE—UNDERSTANDING—HARMONY

FOR as long as the Militia and its successor, the National Guard, have existed, the citizen-soldier has wanted to be accepted and respected by his professional Service comrades as a member of the one Army. The same desire has applied, during the shorter existence of a separate Air Force, to the citizen-airman—Guardian or Reservist.

It takes no student of military history to recognize that the word "Guardian" implies security to the homefront, as it did to the family of battle and the sharing of common peril, the distinctions nearly disappear. But such is the faculty of human nature that even the awards and decorations and citations that attest to bravery and outstanding service of Regulars, Guardmen and Reservists alike, tends to be overlooked as the wars in which they were earned, fade into the past. And the invisible line dividing the "amateur" from the "professional" becomes almost real.

For a solid decade, the Air Force and its reserve forces have had generally close and harmonious relations. In that same span of time, unfortunately, the going has been much rougher among the Army components.

Bearing that in mind, in particular, there have been encouraging signs of a change for the better. Veteran Guardmen have become cynical over hearing nice words—they've been hearing speeches for years—for too infrequently have they seen matching action. But today, Guardians, in a position to know are aware of specific things that have been done by Army Secretary Brucker and by his key Service subordinate in support of a strong Army National Guard.

The "One Army" theme has been emphasized and reemphasized in Guard circles. Steps to translate this fine-sounding slogan into a series of actions were being taken at a Pentagon conference among Mr Brucker and ranking officers of the RA, the Guard and the Res, at our press time. It could—and we hope, will—provide a solid pivot point to turn Army-Guard-Reserve relations permanently down the right road.

It was unfortunate, then, that one high-ranking officer of the Air Force should repeat old wounds that seemed to have being healing nicely. It was doubly unfortunate that his reported remarks, though possibly intended to cover only the Air Reserve forces, with emphasis on the Air National Guard—which was bad enough, in itself—could be interpreted as a nonsequence swing at the entire National Guard system.

On the credit side, there were powerful indications that his admittedly personal views—though expressed while pinch-hitting for his Chief—were 180° off the topmost policy line. They can counter to the expressions of relief upon the National Guard system, from the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Air Force, the Secretary of the Army, and others in high policy positions.

There were other healthy evidences, too, of a more solid basis for fundamentals of problems of cost among all components. A common phenomenon is the way in which Advisors and other Active personnel who have a long exposure to the Guard, become, generally, thoroughly avid on the system. This is important in the long range, for a proportion of those who undergo this experience while in the company and early field grades, may be destined for important policy-influencing positions later during their careers.

There is the fine mutual respect engendered by close association among members of the Active and Reserve Forces at Service schools and during other extended periods of active training.

But, these things take time to flower into full effect. One of the immediate problems lies in man's resistance to giving up fixed notions. While the Chief—civilian or military—lays down a certain policy line, subordinate follow it, though sometimes with mental reservation. With the inevitable turnover of Chiefs as well as ADM, a certain number of those who dutifully keep silent though disagreeing with the policy, rise to positions where their contrary notions can be made to prevail. And turmoil pops up again.

One remedy often propounded by Guardmen but rarely applied, lies in education at an early military age. Half-hearted gestures have been made from time to time—never, we have reason to believe, pushed energetically at all echelons. The "future general" following the West Point route gets one hour, in his four years, of instruction about the Guard. Here, and at the Air Force Academy are the points, of all others, where should be laid an educational foundation of the importance of the National Guard Reserve, on which the young officer then can build by shoulder-to-shoulder contact with his citizen-comrades in his way up the career ladder.

Through knowledge comes understanding. Through understanding comes harmony. With harmony, we at last can have what we all fervently desire: One Army! One Air Force!

As We See It

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE NATIONAL GUARD ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES

I MASSACHUSETTS AVE., N. W., WASHINGTON 1, D. C.
PHONE DISTRICT 7-0341

NOVEMBER, 1959

CONTENTS

13-11

Publication Office

Tetegraph Press, Inc.
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

General offices: 1 Massachusetts Ave., N. W., Washington 3, D. C. Second class postage paid at Harrisburg, Pa., and at additional mailing offices.

Discount rates are available for home delivery: $2.00 per year. A year's subscription is included within the annual dues paid by members of the National Guard Association of the United States. Subscriptions to foreign countries $2.50 per year.

SPECIAL RATES TO NATIONAL GUARD UNITS FOR BULK SUBSCRIPTIONS TO ONE ADDRESS: 11 to 100 subscriptions, $1.75 per subscription; 101 to 800 subscriptions, $1.50 per subscription; 801 or more subscriptions, $1.25 per subscription; SINGLE COPY, 25c.

ALL MATERIAL INTENDED FOR PUBLICATION, AND SUBSCRIPTIONS SHOULD BE ADDRESSED TO 1 MASSACHUSETTS AVE., N.W., WASHINGTON 1, D. C.

THE NATIONAL GUARDIAN welcomes original articles, provided the subject is matters of National defense with special emphasis on the National Guard and Air National Guard aspects. Payment is made upon publication, at a minimum rate of three cents per published word. Manuscripts must be accompanied by return postage, and no responsibility is assumed for their safe handling.

Prompt notice is requested of change of address, preferably by the return of an unmailed copy of the magazine. PLEASE INCLUDE YOUR OLD AS WELL AS YOUR NEW ADDRESS.

Copyright, 1959, The National Guard Association of the United States. All rights reserved.

NATIONAL GUARD ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES

Officers

Maj. Gen. William H. Harris, Jr., President
Maj. Gen. A. Walsh, Vice-President
Maj. Gen. Carl L. Menne, Vice-President
Maj. Gen. Lee M. Byars, Treasurer

Committee on Publication

Maj. Gen. Fred C. Tandy, Chairman
Maj. Gen. C. W. Wynn, Vice-Chairman
Maj. Gen. J. E. Stempel, Historian
Brig. Gen. Harry W. McMillan, Historian
Brig. Gen. Glen S. Albright, Historian
Brig. Gen. Garnett V. McCall, Historian
Col. John R. Dubly

Executive Staff

THE NATIONAL GUARDIAN

Alta. Past President, Editor
W. D. McIlhenny, Associate Editor
John Bibb, Office Manager

November, 1959

DEAR GUARDMEN: String up our current crop of prospects for Calendar Girl of the Month Contest (One Inside Back Cover), we came up with some enlightening information: of nine photos now in the file we 've labelled "Future Possibilities," three of them are Texan beauties—one-third! And leading them in the past year's issues, we note that three of 12 also were from the Lone Star State—one-fourth.

There's no doubt in our mind how Texas will interpret our findings. "It just proves what we've said all along, that most beautiful American women (and most of the Country's best photographers) are from Texas," they'll claim.

But we're going to take the risk that goes with contradicting a Texan and say we disagree. All the figures prove to us is that Texas does have its fair share of pretty girls and of good photographers, but that Texas Guardmen are a lot more imaginative and energetic than it comes to putting the two in working proximity to each other—and to Guard activities.

Which reminds us—we haven't yet seen any samples of what the 40th and largest—State has to offer in the way of Guard-oriented pulpitude. How about it, Alaskans?—WDMG

NATIONAL GUARD ASSOCIATION OF THE UNITED STATES

DEAR GUARDMEN: String up our current crop of prospects for Calendar Girl of the Month Contest (One Inside Back Cover), we came up with some enlightening information: of nine photos now in the file we labelled "Future Possibilities," three of them are Texan beauties—one-third! And leading them in the past year's issues, we note that three of 12 also were from the Lone Star State—one-fourth.

There's no doubt in our mind how Texas will interpret our findings. "It just proves what we've said all along, that most beautiful American women (and most of the Country's best photographers) are from Texas," they'll claim.

But we're going to take the risk that goes with contradicting a Texan and say we disagree. All the figures prove to us is that Texas does have its fair share of pretty girls and of good photographers, but that Texas Guardmen are a lot more imaginative and energetic than it comes to putting the two in working proximity to each other—and to Guard activities.

Which reminds us—we haven't yet seen any samples of what the 40th and largest—State has to offer in the way of Guard-oriented pulpitude. How about it, Alaskans?—WDMG

DEAR GUARDMEN: String up our current crop of prospects for Calendar Girl of the Month Contest (One Inside Back Cover), we came up with some enlightening information: of nine photos now in the file we labelled "Future Possibilities," three of them are Texan beauties—one-third! And leading them in the past year's issues, we note that three of 12 also were from the Lone Star State—one-fourth.

There's no doubt in our mind how Texas will interpret our findings. "It just proves what we've said all along, that most beautiful American women (and most of the Country's best photographers) are from Texas," they'll claim.

But we're going to take the risk that goes with contradicting a Texan and say we disagree. All the figures prove to us is that Texas does have its fair share of pretty girls and of good photographers, but that Texas Guardmen are a lot more imaginative and energetic than it comes to putting the two in working proximity to each other—and to Guard activities.

Which reminds us—we haven't yet seen any samples of what the 40th and largest—State has to offer in the way of Guard-oriented pulpitude. How about it, Alaskans?—WDMG