A year ago, when I entered the office of Association president, I spelled out in this space some goals and objectives for the coming presidential term. Thirteen months later, I'd like to revisit that list, make a few corrections, and then set out the agenda for 1992.

The six goals I established upon election at the Reno Conference were:

Communications. Do a better job of telling our membership in the states what we are doing in Washington, D.C. Some might say that if one reads this magazine, you will know much of what you need to know about the workings of the NGAUS. Further, we routinely send out ACTIONGRAMS, the Legislative Action Plan, the Long Range Plan and other documents that spell out the Association's ongoing activities. But as the company grade letter writing contest proved last year, many of our members still aren't getting the word. We must redouble our efforts to push the NGAUS message down the chain of command so that all our members, not merely general officers, know of our activities and support the Association's goals.

Full Disclosure. A perception had grown up that we were keeping some things secret, such as the budget. We published the full budget in this magazine in the March 1991 issue. We have had far fewer questions about it since then. In particular, there had been a widespread perception among many members of the NGAUS' leadership that the NGAUS' leadership knew was untrue, that vast quantities of money were being lavished on high-level travel, staff and other expenses. The fact is that the task forces consume just $46,730 out of a total Association budget of $53.2 million.

Membership. Beginning in the mid-1980s, the NGAUS began to experience some difficulties in maintaining its traditionally high level of membership. For many years, the NGAUS had boasted that it spoke for upward of 98 percent of the officers in the National Guard. By 1986, that had sunk below the 90 percent level.

Several years ago, partially in response to this situation, we created a permanent Membership Committee. It is chaired by our NGAUS secretary, MG William J. Jeffers (ret) of California. This committee has developed some innovative approaches to improving membership performance. Today, we are happy to report that in 1991, we reached 95 percent of potential.

Getting back to communications, telling the NGAUS story to the junior officer continues to be one of the greatest challenges for the Association's leadership. "What have you done for me lately?" remains a legitimate question from a lieutenant to the NGAUS Executive Council. If we can't articulate a proper and convincing answer to this question, then membership deserves to suffer. We believe we do have a convincing answer, however. It merely is for us and for the National Guard leadership in the states to transmit this answer to all levels of the Guard officer membership.

Full-time vs. Part-time. In my initial column, I noted that there seems to be a perception in the states that the NGAUS spends an inordinate amount of time pursuing issues of primary interest to the full-time force rather than to traditional Guard members. As I mentioned, this was not my perception after having served—at that time—more than eight years on the NGAUS Executive Council. However, as perceptions sometimes are more important than reality, we needed to address this notion.

Only the membership can tell us whether we have done a good job on this one. Perhaps our attention to force structure issues in 1991, which will continue in 1992, is part of the answer. Maintaining an appropriate level of force structure in the Army National Guard is both a traditional and full-time issue in the Guard.

Minuteman Trust. This is an ongoing challenge. We continue to move toward a successful conclusion of the $5 million fund drive. This money is what is required for us to begin work on the Museum of the National Guard. We hit the $2 million mark in cash and pledges toward $3 million amount we plan to raise within the National Guard family. Furthermore, our target from corporations, foundations and historical trusts.

We dedicated the new NGAUS Memorial in Washington September 22. A part of that dedication was the consecrating of Medal of Honor Gallery and the unveiling of the new Minuteman statue. However, much remains to be done. We need the remainder of money to do it.

Feedback. Lt Col Bell runs both ways. While it may seem that the NGAUS constantly calling the states and its officers to alert them to topics of interest to the Guard in the larger world. Do you want us to do it? What are our priorities? Do they differ from the way we have communicated? Please explain.

One manifestation of this pressure was the fact that the 113th Gen. Contingent was a select group that was asked to express our perception in the number of resolutions coming from state associations is that the membership indicates you feel more comfortable proposing ideas for consideration at the national level.

On pages 72-73 of this issue, we will find a wiring diagram of how we have done a good job on this one. Perhaps our attention to force structure issues in 1991, which will continue in 1992, is part of the answer. Maintaining an appropriate level of force structure in the Army National Guard is both a traditional and full-time issue in the Guard.

America's Army is a Total Force. In 1991, dedicated his efforts to the vision of America's Army as a Total Force trained and ready to serve our nation at home and abroad; a strategic force capable of decisive victory. January 1992

Volume XLVI, Number 1

FEATURES

Maryland Wins Gunsmoke

14

The 157th Tactical Fighter Group, Maryland Air Guard, made Air Force history when it became the first A-10 unit to grab the top spot at the Air Force's worldwide gunnery meet, Gunsmoke.

Guard's Role in SOUTHCOM Increases

20

Southern Commander's SOUTHCOM commanders in chief, GEN George A. Joulwan, believe the Total Force is alive and well in this region as the Guard's presence becomes greater and greater.

Lessons Learned in the Gulf War

40

As the Army and Air Guard were mobilized to support the Gulf War, one aspect became crystal clear: The Total Force Policy worked. This article discusses the many roles the Guard played in this successful operation and how that validated the Total Force Policy.

What Constitutes a Just War

66

GEN Gordon R. Sullivan, chief of staff of the Army, shares his views on the just war in his current duty at The Army Professional Military Education Center, takes a hard look at when war is justified.

Amendment to the Constitution

76

The Constitution is the basis for American democracy. This article discusses the definition of American democracy and the role of the Constitution in our society.

Cover:

Lt Col Charlie Morgan, team leader for this year's Gunsmoke World Champions, the 175th TFG, Maryland Air Guard, arrives after his last flight while his crew chiefs and maintenance team wait. Photo, Maj Jean Marie Beall. Design, Johnson Design Group.

DEPARTMENTS

President's Message 2
Washington Tie-Lines 4
Views From the Field 6
Capital Focus 11
Newsbreaks 12
Leading Edge 110
Enlisted People 114
Guard Stars 116
Posting the Guard 118
Publisher's Notebook 122

PUBLICATION STAFF

MG Bruce Jacobs (ret) Publisher
COL Reid K. Beveridge Editor
CAP Pamela A. Kane Managing Editor
Maj Jean Marie Beall Assistant Editor/Features
Selinda Realty Assistant/Editor/Production
COL John C. Philbrick (ret) Advertising Sales
Col David A. McLaughlin (ret) Controller

Cover:

Lt Col Charlie Morgan, team leader for this year's Gunsmoke World Champions, the 175th TFG, Maryland Air Guard, arrived after his last flight while his crew chiefs and maintenance team wait. Photo, Maj Jean Marie Beall. Design, Johnson Design Group.